A Philistine in Bohemia FIRE IN SHANLEY'S INFORMERS GUARD AGAINST POISON;

By O. HENRY-

The Romance of a Cook, a Count and a Colleen; to Say Nothing of a New York "House of (More or Less) Mystery."

(This is the fifth of a series of O. Henry's best short stories. One of these stories will be printed such Saturday throughout the summer.)

ATY DEMPSEY'S mother kept a furnished room house in an easis of the allens, south of Union Square. The business was not profitable. If the two scraped together enough to meet the landlord's agent on rent day and negotiate for the ingredients of a daily Irish stew they called it success. Often the stew lacked both meat and potatoes. Sometimes as bad as consomme with music.

In this mouldy old house Katy waxed plump and pert and wholesome and a beautiful and freekled as a tiger lily. She was the good fairy who was guilty of Cool Heads Prevent Tragedy, placing the damp clean towels and cracked pitchers of freshly laundered Croton

You are informed (by virtue of the privileges of astronomical discovery) that the star lodger's name was Mr. Brunelli. His wearing a yellow tie and paxing his rent projectly distinguished him from the other ledgers. His raiment was ndid, his complexion olive, his mustache fierce, his manners a prince's, his rings and pins as magnificent as those of a travelling dentist,

Suspects Arrested To-Dayat Auburn and Camden as Two Fugitives Are Released.

Acting on authentic clues that "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg and "Gyp thte Blood" Horowitz are hiding in Sullivan County in the Catskill Mountains, Inspector Hughes has left for that locality to take personal charge of a squad of thirty Headquarters detectives engaged in the search for the fugitives. There is a confident feeling among the heads of the Police Department that the two missing slayers of Herman Rosenthal will be rounded up before Monday.

Aided by the local authorities, the New York detectives are going through every mountain resort with a fine-toothed comb. The trail of "Lefty Louie" from this city to Sullivan or Orange County is said to

The fear that persons interested in putting them out of the way might smuggle poison into their food has prompted "Jack" Rose, "Bridgie" Webber and Harry Vallon to refuse to eat anything taken to them in the West Side Court prison that is not delivered by persons in whom they have the utmost confidence. For the past two days the three informers have eaten only food given to them by their wives or Previously their meals had been sent in from a Broadway hotel. Following some mysterious tip, they announced that they were suspicious of anything eatable coming from sources - itside their families.

Webber's wife and Vallon's wife carry their meals to the prison. Rose's meals are furnished by his brothers. All the food is prepared by
